Exhibition:

The Colour of Life

New paintings by Karen Windle and fine art photographs by
Dave Underwood

5 - 26 July 2013

Karen Windle, Blue Pond

Opens: Friday 5 July 2013 at 6pm

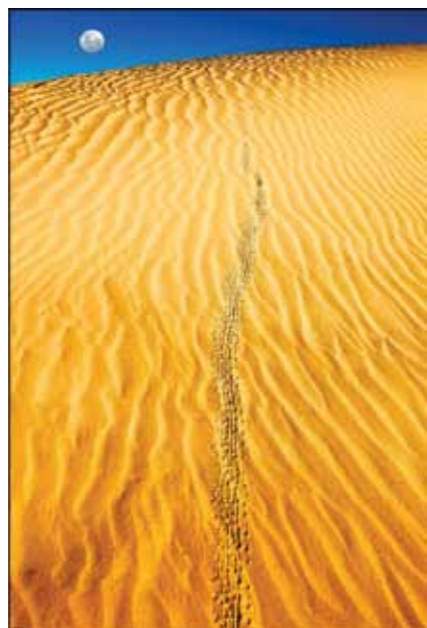

Opening Speakers: Artists
Dave Underwood and Karen Windle

In this exciting exhibition of painting and photography, Karen and Dave use colour, textures, patterns, perspectives, experiences, emotions, passions and circumstances to depict life on this wonderful earth.

Karen says of her art practice 'It is with paint that I express myself and when I paint I choose my colours intuitively. I tend to grab a handful of tubes of paint in the colours that appeal to me at the time. I may see a field of flowers, or a pond, sometimes a landscape or still life, these are things I know and have experienced at some time, images that I remember from past events or dreams.'

Karen Windle, Colour of Life #1

Dave Underwood, Dunescape Moonrise

'These are the colours of my life, a simple reflection of my days of being able to experience life in all the colours of the rainbow.

With these new paintings I hope that my colours will bring a measure of joy into your life also.'

Dave Underwood's fine art photographs will also be showcased in this exhibition. Dave's work as a travel photographer focuses on experiences and journeys undertaken. 'Travel is a life experience, an education, and my images seek to depict the personal wonder of discovery. Our planet is an amazing place. Our challenge is to see it with all our senses. Our reward is the colour of life.'

Dave Underwood, Peace, Love & Understanding

Artists of the Month:

June

Gemma Sneddon Textiles

'A rabid textile crafter, I love to knit, weave, crochet and embroider. My pieces for June include lacy mohair shawls, cosy hand woven scarves and wonderfully warm wraps. There are also knitted and crocheted wrist warmers, for all the touch screen techies who need to stay snug this winter.

I will also be showing some head-hugging beanies, as well as some of my new works which are several cross-stitched pieces. With my embroidery, I enjoy using traditional techniques to create something unexpected. I like putting a modern twist on 19th century patterns, or using delicate stitches to create an anatomical heart.

I have had work in a number of exhibitions including Knitting Nancy's Aviary (Fringe 2013), Irving Baby! (2012) and Knitted City (Come Out Festival 2011).

I operate under the alias 'crafty and devious', and have been known to stage radical craft events, subvert the stereotypes of traditional crafting, and yarn bomb the city under the cover of darkness. I also maintain a blog about my textile exploits at craftyanddevious.wordpress.com.

Gemma will be at the Pepper Street Arts Centre on Saturday 15 June 2pm - 4pm, demonstrating her knitting and crochet. Free.

July

Anne Martin Textiles

'Growing up in an artistic family surrounded by art and craft, my mother taught me to knit and crochet when I was about 10 years old. I produced numerous garments of varying expertise and a growing passion.

One of my early creations I took to my first job interview, being for the position of knitwear designer at Coats Patons. I got the job and spent seven idyllic years as their designer during which I taught myself aran cables, colour change patterns, texture stitches, lace, fair-isle and crochet. I also learnt pattern writing and was involved with yarn development and colour selection. Fashion and yarn research opportunities took me overseas on a regular basis.

I always have several knitting and crochet projects on the go. My toddler's jackets I can create while travelling, while my complex designs are produced in my home studio.

One day I would like to produce a really well written children's knitting pattern book. Accurate explanations can make the difference between someone thinking they are 'no good' at knitting, to actually enjoying the process and having a successful outcome.

I hope you enjoy my display.'

Anne will be at the Pepper Street Arts Centre on Saturday 6 July 2pm - 4pm, demonstrating her craft. Free.
